Two Little Theater Plays in Rehearsal

Rehearsals for the coming plays are in full swing. A real Irishman with the map of the old country instead of a face, has been cast of "Spreading the News." It has been rumored that he will do a real Irish jig. He answers to the name of R. H. Hoagland.

This delightful comedy of Lady Gregory's has no star part, but all of the characters do quite a bit of twinkling. Herbert Heron really has the pivotal part and Bert is some pivot.

"Cranford" is also well under way. Mrs. Mary Hand, the competent directress, is devoting all her energies to her large cast, which includes many of the best known women of Carmel.

Dr. Alfred E. Burton has made attractive sets for the plays and Edward G. Kuster has planned striking lighting effects. It will be well to secure tickets early as the seating capacity of Arts and Crafts is limited and the program bids fair to be exceptionally popular.

Application For Stage Line Permit Under Consideration

Many Carmel and Highlands residents were in attendance at Colton Hall in Monterey last Tuesday afternoon on the occasion of the hearing on the application of Charles C. Smith to the state railroad commission for permission to conduct a through passenger and merchandise service between Carmel Highlands and Monterey.

Former Assemblyman William T. Satterwhite, examiner for the commission, conducted the hearing, and will lay all the data and testimony and his own recommendation before his superiors. The application will be granted or denied within three weeks, so 'tis said.

There is a particular demand for a service that will meet the two trains that arrive at Monterey at night.

Telephone Company Making Many Needed Improvements

The local telephone company is spending thousands of dollars on the peninsula at the present time on plant improvements to supply the much needed service required by the many additional telephones that have been recently installed on the peninsula.

There will be a cable installed from the Monterey exchange to Carmel and Pebble Beach in the near future, the cable having already arrived at the Monterey warehouse.

Manager F. A. Edwards states that Monterey is being given the preference over many other localities in the state.

Nearly Six Thousand School Children in Monterey County

There are 5735 children between the years of 3 and 17 in Monterey county according to Joseph P. Felz, school attendance officer, who has just completed the tabulation of the school census returns, required under the new registration law. They are classified as follows: White, 5059; Negro, 39; Chinese, 65; Japanese, 22; American Indian, 5; Mexican, 75; others 34. Of the total, 48 children are attending private schools—most of them in Carmel.

The Home Paper - Its Problems

The Pine Cone has announced itself as devoted to art, music, letters, drama, but, frankly speaking, we are also devoted to bringing in the shekels. We must confess to a liking for food, good clothing, a few luxuries. Like the artist and the grocer, the painter and the butcher, we like automobiles and movies and comfortable and well-appointed homes. To do this, we try to conduct our business in such a manner as to benefit the community in which we live and to remunerate ourselves at the same time. All we ask of the public is an even break.

We have endeavored to work along certain lines: To give to our readers a clean, newsy paper of this community.

To print nothing malicious, unkind or uncharitable—at the same time trying to be impersonal, constructive and aggressive.

To support our town's institutions and to boost everything that makes for civic betterment.

To advertise Carmel to the outside world in the only way it should be advertised—by emphasizing the beauty of its environment and the creative work done here.

To see in public controversies that both sides are well aired—to give all the facts and let an intelligent public judge for themselves.

These are pretty big ideals and if we occasionally seem to fall short of them, our readers should remember that only one Man ever was perfect and they nailed him to the cross.

Who stands back of every club, every organization in the town and devotes columns of space (sometimes whole editions) to boosting their activities, but the home paper?

Like other papers, we make no money out of our circulation—but the fact remains that we do sell advertising. We are called on innumerable times to donate that to some local affair. If we were to figure up the amount in dollars and cents which we give to clubs, organizations and individuals in a year it would probably amount to ten times that given by any other local merchant. And with all that, we are supposed to have the wisdom of the serpent, the patience of Job and the strategy of a Rich elieu. It's a pretty large order to fill.

And now, let us look on the other side of the ledger. What do the public give us? Many of them give us encouragement, loyalty and enthusiastic support. There are those, however, who become disgruntled over trifles, who wish to dictate our policy to us, who have no understanding of the difficulties that beset the newspaper—that general buffer of factional strife.

If we say little or nothing about a play, we are weak-kneed. If we say what we think, we are biased or prejudiced. Some of our citizens use our own columns to vilify us; they come to our work room and borrow our files to get some sort of incriminating evidence against us; they borrow our cuts to send to San Francisco printers for hundred dollar jobs. They cancel their advertising if we don't say editorially what pleases them. They burn up two dollars worth of gas and use up $50 worth of time going across the hill to save a dollar on a printing job. You can get eggs five cents cheaper, too, by going to Monterey than by patronizing the home grocer, but if you did that all the time and if everybody did it, there'd be no more groceries here and you'd have to buy everything across the hill whether you wanted to or not—and then it's kind of convenient to hold someone nearby responsible for the condition of the eggs—and the printing.

The wise and progressive merchant knows that it is well for a community to have a paper; that in order for that paper to live and prosper it must have the united and enthusiastic support of its home people and that no community on earth can do efficient work without cooperation.

The Pine Cone has really much to be thankful for. There are many who commend it for its fairness, who appreciate its clean news and independence of its attitude toward local affairs. Our advertisers are boosters for us because they realize that the home paper is an integral part of the community and that many loose ends would be created should there be no paper vitally interested in Carmel.

Memorial Fountain Fund Goes Over Top

The long uphill fight is ended. On the 15th of last June, the Memorial Fountain Committee had accumulated through the vaudeville show, the Manzanita Club dance and donations from the Community Club and private citizens, $476.46. It was estimated that the total cost of the work when completed would reach approximately $1,000.

There seemed to be little or no chance of the success of the funds and it bade fair to be another of the permanently uncompleted institutions of the town. 'Twas then that the Pine Cone thrust itself into the breach and started the "Soldiers Memorial Thermometer," and we pledged ourselves to send it to the thousand mark. Today through its efforts we have ready to report a total of $1135.67, $658.54 of which has been raised through our columns.

Checks have come in from all parts of the country. Some have liked to give so well that they have been repeaters. People with little of this world's goods have made their sacrifices. Soon we are to have the completed work and it should not be forgotten when the tablet, "To Those Who Served," is placed across the top, that the labor and sacrifice entailed in its construction are a service as well as a tribute.

Many have contributed time and labor as well as money.

C. Sumner Greene, the architect, has donated his services in designing and supervising the building of the Memorial.

Rock was donated by H. A. Russell, Edward Hatton, and Fred Wermuth.

T. B. Reardon gave the labor and plumbing connections and the Monterey County Water Works, the water connections.

Winsor Jesselyn, Harrison Godwin, Ernest Schweninger, Perry Newberry, Tom Cator and Argyll Campbell and Charles Van Riper, carried through to a successful conclusion a double vaudeville show and raised $332.86.

The Manzanita Club gave a dance which netted $52.

Mrs. Agnes Signor gave another dance at Hotel La Playa which brought in $30, and she and some Pine Cone friends made $15.75 later at another party.

The Columbia Park Boys added $17 to the fund and now the Moving Picture Association comes in for a glorious finish, which they made at Wednesday night's movie, to the amount of $130.

The Committee which has been in charge of the building of the memorial are: Dr. C. A. McCollum, Noah Whitney, C. S. Greene and Argyll Campbell.

Among the many individuals who have contributed are the following. There are many others who have asked that their names be omitted.

THE ROMANCE OF ADVERTISING

The adventurer who starts out on his travels meets perils and dangers and by his shrewdness and initiative, manages to avert them and accomplish the purpose of his journey. People say his story is romantic. But you do not have to go to the frontiers and ends of the earth to find romance.

The advance of many young men in commercial life has this element of romance, of triumph over difficulties. At the start they did not look like winners. Often they did not have much education or social advantages. But they had an idea in their head, that by telling the public what you have to sell, and supply good stuff, you can invariably win trade.

From the very opening of their little shops, those fellows would begin telling the public about their goods. They considered that the distribution of their information was just as much an essential of business as hiring a store to trade in. And from the very first, as the result of this idea, the public responded to their initiative, and came in increasing numbers to see what they were selling.

As their sales grew, so their publicity would grow. In many cities fellows who were at first laughed at for their deficiencies, have risen to the top of the ladder, just because they made use of the power of advertising. Their triumph over obstacles and difficulties had as much romance as the adventures of the travellers in far lands.

HIGHER FREIGHT RATES!

In simple unmistakable language, decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission show that separation of Central Pacific from Southern Pacific lines would result in higher freight rates.

The proposed separation of the interwoven lines would make necessary two-line hauls where freight is now handled direct by a one-line haul. The principle that two-line hauls necessitate higher freight rates is clearly set forth in the Piedra Rock Company case, decision No. 10619 of the California Railroad Commission, case No. 1645, decided June 23, 1922, wherein the commission cites a number of decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In this decision the California Railroad Commission says:

"Railroad commissions generally, as well as the Interstate Commerce Commission, have recognized the principle that a two-line haul is entitled to a proportionately higher rate than a one-line haul.

"In 33, I. C. C. 163, in the case of Meridian Fertilizer Factory vs. A. and S. Railway Co., an arbitrary of 2 cents per 100 pounds for a two-line haul over a one-line haul was established. In that opinion it was stated the commission has on various occasions recognized it is just and reasonable for two or more independent lines, not part of the same management or making up a through route, to charge a somewhat higher rate for a two-line haul than would be deemed reasonable for a single-line haul of equal distance.

"In 28, I. C. C. 264, being a rehearing in the matter of Sheridan vs. C. B. & Q. R. R. in the above entitled proceeding, the commission confirmed its previous conclusion allowing a higher rate for a two-line haul than for a one-line haul for distances within 500 miles.

"In 39, I. C. C. 124, the commission says: 'It is a well-established principle of rate making that ton-mile earnings properly may decrease as the length of the haul increases, and that ordinary rates for a one-line haul may be lower than for a movement over two or more lines.' The commodity involved in that proceeding was brick.

"In 43, I. C. C. 632, the commission says: 'Other things being equal, the rate for a two-line haul may properly be higher than the rate for a single-line haul.'

"In 44, I. C. C. 669, the commission says: 'Ordinarily the rate for a one-line haul should be lower than the rate over a three-line route. . . .'

"In 50, I. C. C. 43, Royster Guano Company vs. A. C. L. R. R. Co.: 'Somewhat higher rates for hauls over routes composed of two or more lines not under a common management and control are reasonable.'

"The commission in the case cited immediately above prescribed mileage rates for one-line hauls and for two-line hauls and used this language: 'For hauls over two or more lines of railway that are not under the same management or control, 20 cents per ton may be added to these rates.' The commodity in the foregoing proceeding was fertilizer.

"In 2, C. R. C. 241, in 1913, this commission refers to the contention of carriers that 'Where rates are to be made over two connecting lines it is more expensive to the carriers in the aggregate than a single movement over one line between the same points.'

"Furthermore, a two-line haul rate that is less than a combination of locals is obviously less remunerative to either participating company than a haul local to one line. The revenue must be divided and in all cases when such two-line haul revenue is split, one or the other or both of the lines must shrink their locals."

"Loaded From All Eternity."

You did not foresee the death of M. De Turenne, nor the cannonball shot at random which singled him out from ten or twelve others. I, who see the hand of Providence in everything, behold this cannon loaded from all eternity. — Mme. De Sevigne.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

By Ann Burroughs

Indelible: By Elliot Paul

A first novel undoubtedly, but one with as much food for interest and speculation as was the ungrammatical and imperfectly planned, but at times tremendous, "The Harbor," which ushered in Ernest Poole not so many years ago.

"Indelible" took its heaviest inspiration from "Jean Christophe," but its author was unwilling to slight other favorites. In consequence, as one passes through the volume, one recognizes many friends. I have not an accurate list, but "The Young Visitors," "Dere Mabel," Dorothy Richardson, and Booth Tarkington passages linger vividly in memory.

The plot of the novel is melodramatic. A young Russo-Jewish immigrant and the talented son of a lower middle class suburban family meet at a musical conservatory, are its members, and fall in love. The Jewess has been sent there by her second-hand-clothes-dealing father who is patronized by the Irish boss of the ward in which his second-hand shop is located. The young bourgeoisie is urged along the difficult paths of his career by a drunken neighbor who plays the zither and by a spinster neighbor who loves trees and is a delicious radical. A gruesome accident to the Jewess on the night of her debut brings about the crisis of the novel. Suspense is melodramatically sustained for over a hundred pages more until the happy ever-after is achieved.

But the real interest and value of the verdant novel is in the author rather than in the plot. The author has many talents and many prejudices. Both are given a healthy airing in this first novel. He (or she) has a feeling for patterns, a practiced eye for forms in people and things as well as in novels, a sense of humor which would slightly amuse even the modern Kennel Digby, a strong sense for fair play, a delight in romance, and a generosity which leads him to include much literary criticism with his romance.

He certainly is a person worth watching, and one whom on the knees of the gods be it that large sales and popularity do not spoil.

Tales of the Dying West:

by Fred R. Bechdolt

Mr. Bechdolt's Tales of the West are thrillingly and dramatically told. Concerned as they chiefly are with the bandits, bad men, and Indians of the early days of California and Arizona, there pass before the mind's eye of the reader daring bandits hunted up and down the lengths of states killing and plundering, mail coaches robbed with never less than half a dozen deaths, Indian ambuscades with a hundred or more Indians slain and several white men, ranch raidings, desert deaths, pony riders (our own Mr. Hand included), the rise and fall of towns, chieftains, sheriffs, 'he wolves,' and bandit kings.

But thrilling as the tales are and rewarding—and there is a successful shooting for every page—my greatest pleasure from the book was gained by following the bandits under Mr. Bechdolt's expert guidance especially along the many lovely and familiar ways of California, from Calaveras county to the south and back again, over desert wastes and mountain passes, through valleys and foothills, familiar as they are to native Californians and delightful as they are to traverse either in reality or in imagination. The tales are thus a delight for men, women and children who thrill to tales of man hunts and dexterous gun play, and for adult Californians who delight in every nook and cranny of their native state.

Vagrant Impressions of The Pine Nut

Last Tuesday morning a keen invigorating breeze rattled the front door of the Pine Cone office and blew into the composing room. We looked up. Joseph Blethen stood before us. The press had broken down that morning and everything had gone wrong. We were all grouchy; but when Joe Blethen smiled, we just capitulated to the sunshine of it. The fog outside looked rosy and the sun came through.

Unheralded Arrival

He had arrived in town at 9, held a parade of his household goods and chattels down the Rue de Bump at 10, at 11 he succumbed to the smell of printers' ink, and at 12 invited the Pine Nut to luncheon. That was going some for the first half-day. Understanding the difficulties which might beset the lady of the house in passing out a hunk of bread and cheese on moving day, I desisted; but 2 o'clock found me at Ninth and San Antonio streets, where the Blethens had already lived their brief careers as Carmelites. That was the best I could do. I just couldn't keep away any longer—neither will you when you know them—and the best of it is they won't want you to.

Lares and Penates

They had already unpacked a grand piano, a grandfather's clock that looked as though it had belonged to one of Washington's ancestors, several times removed, and Mrs. Blethen was going merrily back and forth with mysterious-looking parcels she was getting out of barrels.

We sat down in the hot November sunshine. He took off his hat and fanned himself. Whenever she passed he—well, anyway, I began to size them up for a pair of honeymooners, so I hinted around rather ladylike, and sure enough, I learned that—but wait, I'll tell you all about that later.

Why Pick on Us?

I started my interview with: "How did you happen to creep in to Carmel so quietly?"

"Well, we were considering a number of places. We went first to New York. My wife took one look at it and we fled back to the coast. Last June we spent a day here and ever since then the siren has sung its song of Carmel to me. Last week I came down with a chip on my shoulder to see if it would get me. It did. I'm here to stay."

So that's how it happened that Joseph Blethen—short story writer, poet, playwright and successful newspaper man—has settled in our midst. After this we drifted into intimate talk and I got some interesting high lights on his life.

Bits of Biography

Away back when Heck was a pup—52 years ago in fact—little Joseph Blethen first squealed in the state of Maine. He's done the same thing several times since, but he's also laughed and joshed the while he was scrapping with labor unions on the Seattle Times, but his bluff, good-hearted friendliness won him many friends and he's been able to attain success, and now that he can do what he wants he can retire and mow his own lawn if it pleases him.

He got his early training on the Minneapolis Tribune, owned by his father, Col. Alden J. Blethen, when Joseph, Jr., was a young lad just graduated from the University of Minnesota. The family had the pioneer instinct and the next move was further west. That was twenty-six years ago, when they broke into the newspaper game as owners of the Seattle Daily Times. Young Joseph was in turn managing editor, business manager and, on the death of his father, five years ago, he became president of the company and it was only last March that he sold out his interests to other members of the Blethen family.

Joe Blethen was one of the most prominent figures in the Northwest during the last two decades. A whole volume could be written of his reminiscences—good stories they'd all be, too. Perry Newberry, Fred Bechdolt, Kenneth Beaton, all knew him when the century was still young. Bechdolt and Beaton both worked with him on the staff, and our Bill Nye was for a number of years in charge of the composing room—so Mr. Blethen comes here not as a stranger but a friend.

Literary Side Predominant

The wonder of it is that as a side line to all his other responsibilities, Blethen always wrote fiction. He has fifty-five published stories to his credit, quite an amount of verse, an opera and a play. The stories have appeared in the Post, Ladies' Home Journal, McClure's, Success and other periodicals. They were mostly stories with a business turn. During the war he versified considerably. "Laffey's Pack" was one of the few war poems published by the Post.

Two years ago Robert Frothingham was getting ready for the publication of three anthologies—"The Songs of Men," "Songs of the Horse," and "Songs of the Dog." He needed an appreciation of the Alaska husky, and delayed publication while Joe Blethen wrote "The Mushers."

Last winter he took a crack at the scenario game, but came to the conclusion that it was a business by itself, so he picked up his knittin' and went back where he felt safe. One of his late successful literary efforts was a series of six stories atmospheric of newspaper life, in which he has transferred his Dad to the printed page. The old Colonel has become immortalized in his son's "Quills From the Quarantined," which is somewhat along the line of the Cappy Ricks stories. The series has been accepted by Sunset and the first story will appear in April.

May Write Outdoor Play

The sun was getting hot in that court and Joe was getting nervous—we hadn't seen the Missus for two or three minutes—so, thinking I'd take his mind off her, I ventured to remark: "You'll probably eventually write a play for us to try out in our Forest Theater! It's done in all our best families, you know."

He's such an enthusiast about Carmel's everything here that his face takes on a really child-like smile at times. He gave me a sample now and said happily:

"Oh, I suppose I'll take a hand in it, but I want to say that I didn't come down here with any idea of trying to show these writers how to do things. I just want to be a good neighbor and live my life in my own way by doing a few things and doing them well. They don't want to know all this stuff about me. Just tell 'em I'm 52 and not ashamed of it, happy, smoke a pipe and love music."

If I told you nothing else about him, you'd know him by that.

And Now Meet Mrs. Blethen

And now listen, girls, while I tell you about Midgie—that's Mrs. B. She's petite, and has a head of lovely short red curls that would inspire a Titian devotee; a peaches-and-cream complexion; a parrot; a big doll, enthroned in its own wicker chair, and a basket all made nice and comfy for some little dog that no one else wants. She prefers a mongrel, but it must be a puppy to grow up with the scraggly kitten she expects to adopt. And one of her greatest ambitions is to possess half dozen chickens, which she stoutly insists she'll never kill.

Mrs. Blethen has a keen appreciation of music; she is a lover of the outdoors, and Joe says she's a wonderful cook. She's committed herself at present entirely to the job of mothering big Joe Blethen, and it looks as if she's taken on a life job—with no danger of being fired.

And sweetest of all sweet things, she's a bride, and they are a honeymoon couple, and they smile at each other so frequently that everyone near them catches the reflection, and smiles too. Even the Pine Nut smiled, and we hope they'll live in Carmel for all time and be happy ever after.

They are natural wholesome people with a large understanding of humanity and desire for friendship and community life. It seems to me that they are a decided acquisition to our little village. It is of such stuff as the Blethens that Carmel dreams are made of.

We'll all call.

Musical Comedy at Monterey Theater

The eastern comedy success, "Oh Look," which will be the attraction at Monterey theater Wednesday, Nov. 29, is a musicalization of James Montgomery's farce, "Ready Money" one of the big hits several seasons ago. Montgomery re-wrote the piece, while Harry Carroll and Nat Goldstein furnished the jingly, tuneful score of the lyrics.

The star is Harry Fox, who is well known both in vaudeville and on the legitimate stage.

A young man owns a non-producing gold mine without backing for development. A friend loans him money, presumably counterfeit, and everything turns suddenly his way. From a poor disheartened chap he develops into a fine business man, winning wealth for himself and his friends and also the girl of his heart.

As the hero Fox makes splendid use of his talents for bright, swift and effective entertainment.

Supporting Fox will be seen a capable cast of New York players, including a chorus of prize winning beauties.

NOTES OF MUSIC PAINTING, DRAMA

Georgia Kober, president of the Sherwood Music School of Chicago, came to Carmel last week with the Joseph Blethens. Miss Kober has played with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and with Theodore Thomas. She is now on a year's leave of absence and is spending it in San Francisco, but is so pleased with Carmel that she is tempted to make her residence here.

Music week in San Francisco was productive of over one thousand events. On the Monterey peninsula, it was celebrated with the Persinger-Davila concert.

It is rumored that we have barely escaped having Fatty Arbuckle as one of our permanent residents. It seems that we have lost by a very narrow margin. That would have been the last straw.

In the death of Frank Bacon, the theatrical profession will suffer a loss that will not soon be replaced. Californians have always felt a particular pride in his sudden and spectacular rise to fame after a lifetime spent in the hardest and most persistent efforts to attain success.

He was born in Marysville, spent much of his life in San Jose, barnstormed through California in a 10-20-30 cent company, and played comedy roles in the old Heczar stock company. About four years ago, he came into his own on Broadway, starring in his own play, "Lightnin'." In one of the large Eastern cities, the whole town marched with him to the station on his departure after his performance.

A nation mourns his passing.

Percy Gray has gone off to the desert and left at the Bohemian Club in San Francisco a number of his recent watercolors. Mr. Gray spent some time in Carmel about two years ago. He was an intimate friend of Haldee Coleman, former art critic for the Pine Cone.

Many Carmelites will remember Jean Jacques Pfister, who visited the George Seidenhecks frequently. He is now giving an exhibition in New York of his California and Switzerland paintings. Many of them are Carmel subjects—among them, "Point Lobos Sentinel," "Silent Shores," and "Monterey Cypresses."

Contractor Ruthven Gets Sixty Days

On Tuesday evening last the city board of trustees, with all the members present, held an adjourned regular meeting.

Trustee Perry Newberry reported that an initial payment of $500 had been made to the Luverne Company for the new fire truck.

A map was presented to the city by C. S. Olmstead showing proposed additional hydrant locations. The map was adopted and a motion passed that the Monterey County Water Works be requested to proceed with the installation of the mains and hydrants as designated on the map.

The date set for planting shrubs in the park spaces on Ocean avenue was postponed for further consideration.

A bid from Oley & Ramsay on material and labor upon city streets was submitted and accepted, and the contractors were authorized to proceed with the work, releasing the city from all liability in connection with the employers' liability act.

The board then went into executive session presumably to discuss the Osborn claim.

At another meeting on Thursday evening an extension of sixty days was granted Contractor Ruthven to complete the Ocean avenue improvement.

A resolution was adopted providing for the second assessment for Ocean avenue improvement.

Louis Tarango speaking for himself and others, protested that the new garbage dump is offensive and detrimental to property values.

Garden Groups To Be Formed

On Wednesday afternoon thirty enthusiastic men and women met in the headquarters of the Monterey Chamber of Commerce to form a Monterey Peninsula City Beautiful organization. The meeting had been called by Allan Griffin of the Herald, and he was made temporary chairman. An election resulted in the selection of the following permanent officers: Mrs. J. C. Todd, president; Harry Green, vice-president, and Miss Josie Perry, secretary-treasurer.

A discussion of the plan of organization followed. Mr. Green read an account of a so called Outdoor Circle plan used first in Honolulu and later in San Jose. This plan provided for a central planning group which individually instructed and inspired neighborhood groups in the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers. Another plan was proposed by Charles Briggs by which a junior beautifying group was added to the senior group.

A committee consisting of Mrs. Will Jacks of Monterey, Mrs. A. J. Pell of Pacific Grove and Miss Helen Parkes of Carmel, was appointed to decide upon or reject the plan to be adopted.

AUTO INFO

To keep the windshield clear in rainy weather try rubbing a sliced onion over the glass, using the up-and-down stroke. Be sure to coat the entire surface of the glass with the juice of the onion.

Reserve a small space in the tool box for a bar of ordinary laundry soap. This material can be shaved off with a penknife and the chips kneaded into a putty to be used as a temporary repair for leaks in gasoline or oil lines.

Automobile underwriters in the United States have promised a 20 per cent reduction in automobile insurance if a method can be perfected of numbering engines and frames in such a manner that they cannot be changed by the thief.

Old tires should be shifted from the rear to the front, because, of the total power of the motor in an automobile, more than 80 per cent is transmitted to the rear tires, to be expended in pushing the car against the wind, up hill and against other resistance.

According to tests in the problem of paving traction, gasoline consumption by motor vehicles is increased in traveling over a dirt road. Concrete highways show the least resistance to traction in terms of miles per gallon. Brick, macadam and gravel are next in order.

It is necessary to have a rather light-bodied, free flowing oil when the splash type of lubrication system is used. If a heavy grade of oil is used, particularly in cold weather, the parts will be insufficiently lubricated until the engine is thoroughly warmed up.

Child tickets sold, 44 at 25c 11

The management wishes to thank the different business houses and the Carmel Pine Cone, the employees of the Manzanita Theater and the public for their cooperation in making the benefit a success.

A check for the full amount—$130—has been sent to Dr. C. A. McCollom, chairman of the Soldier Memorial Fountain Committee.

Respectfully submitted,

To Honor "Father of Redwoods"

Money for the memorial bronze tablet to Andrew P. Hill, "father of the redwoods," was voted at the November meeting of the Outdoor Art League at the Willows home of Miss Barnhisel, near San Jose. The league expressed its belief that the most fitting memorial to Hill would be the acquiring of a redwood tract near Big Basin, the canyon of the Butano. Hill's last address to the league concerned the buying of this tract for a park.

Unveiling of Harrison Bust

On Dec. 3, there will be unveiled at the Olympic club, in San Francisco, a bust of William Greer Harrison, "grand old man" of that organization, and its president for a generation.

The bust was done by Haig Patigan, the sculptor, and is considered a remarkable likeness. Harrison, who was long ago one of the most conspicuous figures in amateur athletics on the Pacific Coast, had been elected twenty-one consecutive times to the presidency of the Olympic club.

He spent the last few years of his life in Carmel and while here took an active interest in our activities. In which had already been produced for their annual play, "Runnymede," which Harrison had written and which had already been produced professionally. He died in 1916, shortly after his eightieth birthday.

Notable Collection of Verse

Kathleen Norris writes of Miss Nancy Buckley's second book of verse, "Wings of Youth," in last Monday's Examiner:

"Nancy Buckley's music is simplicity's self, touched with a genuine spirituality, and full of the gypsy note so characteristic of the younger American poets. Among the more than fifty songs here assembled are more than a score whose natural lilt will surely prove a temptation to musicians.

These four lines from "Life's Garden," for example, almost sing themselves:

"Ah, what is a lovely garden,
If my heart has no repose?
And what are all splendid flowers
If I cannot reach my rose?"

"Surely none of our California poets has ever packed more beauty into four lines than we find in the quatrain, 'Nostalgia,' which I give complete:

"A silver mist above a summer sea,
The daffodils ablow upon the lea,
The march of stars across the moon-lit dome,
Bring poignant longings for the hills of home."

Manship Starring in England

"The Man Who Came Back," now playing at the Curran Theater in the city, is doubly interesting to Carmelites because it is an adaptation of a story of the same name written by John Fleming Wilson and because George Manship, protege of Garnet Holme and actor of splendid memory in Carmel, is taking the play with his own company on a tour through several larger English towns. There are good houses in San Francisco, and Mr. Manship reports satisfactory houses in England.

Splashes and Splutter

Konrad Bercevic, who spent some time in Carmel last summer, has a story, "Revenge," in this month's Century.

Hollywood has named its recently completed junior high school in honor of Joseph Le Conte, who was one of Berkeley's most loved educators.

The Ferris Hartman-Paul Steindorf company is finishing the second week of that tuneful opera, "The Spring Maid." The next offering will be the "Bohemian Girl."

A sunset service was held on last

Armistice Day on Mount Rubidoux, near Riverside, in honor of the part which the British Empire played in the great world war. Garnet Holme supervised the program.

"A Clean Town" is the name of a new play recently staged and produced in Washington. It is a good natured satire on what our prohibition enforcement officers are doing in the communities of the United States.

A book called "Tay Tay Tales," by Elizabeth De Huc, was reviewed in the November number of the "Bookman" by Mary Austin. In reviewing this book, Mrs. Austin gave, in a general way, a discussion of "American Folklore."

"The Skin Game," which was seen in the Monterey Theater a couple of weeks ago, proved the most popular of the offerings at the Columbia this season. The critics were unanimous in their commendation of the play and the production.

H. G. Wells, novelist and famous as a world historian, who ran for parliament on the labor ticket, was defeated by a conservative in the recent English elections. The most widely known and discussed of his recent books is the famous "Outlines of History."

Last Saturday the San Francisco branch of the League of American Pen Women held a book fair at the Fairmont hotel. Kathleen Norris, Charles Norris, Ruth Comfort Mitchell and Esther Birdsall Darling, all of whom have lived or been in this vicinity at various times, were speakers.

One hundred and forty newspapers and periodicals went out of existence in Germany during a single month last summer. Among them was the "Tagliche Rundschau," a Berlin daily founded 40 years ago, which maintained the highest literary standards, and had the most cultivated circle of readers of any newspaper in Germany.

Many Carmelites saw Madam Medea Radzina in the play, "Enter Madame," at the Plaza some time ago. It may be of interest to know that the Stage Guild have now in preparation, "The Doll's House," with Madame Radzina in the role of Nora. This is to follow "Heartbreak House," the Shaw drama, which is playing this week.

One of Mrs. Francis McComas' paintings is on exhibition at the Court Yard Studios in Grant Avenue and is a study of spring flowers against a dead white background. It has received much attention from the artists in San Francisco, as it is strikingly unusual, the background catching the color reflections. Mrs. McComas bids fair to share her husband's fame as a painter.

The craze for American jazz dancing in London has reached wide proportions, as is witnessed by the large numbers of advertisements in the daily papers, listing instructors in the latest ballroom dances, and the many places furnishing jazz music. Considerable alarm is felt among English musicians, many of whom claim to have thereby lost their jobs.

A short time ago the Pine Cone published a list of new books acquired by the Carmel library. Another one recently added is "The Outline of Science," edited by Professor J. Arthur Thomas, professor of Natural History of Aberdeen. Over one hundred children's books for their department were purchased with the proceeds from the lecture given by G. F. Beardsley at the Arts and Crafts last summer.

Has a Real Grievance.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

A small cottage on Carmelo, near Ocean avenue, for Dr. Florence Belknap of San Jose, is undergoing the finishing touches by Contractor M. J. Murphy. The cottage is admirably arranged and a fine example of a Carmel design at moderate cost.

Leonard Perry is spending a week or ten days in and about Carmel, enjoying old friends and his new Paige roadster. Since leaving here last spring, he has been spending his time around the bay cities, having postponed indefinitely his European trip.

Raymond Leland and family spent last Tuesday in Carmel. They came down from San Jose as a result of a report that their house here was in ruins from the storm. They found that a friend had attended to the damage, which consisted of a swinging window.

It may be of interest to ex-service men in Carmel to know that the last day for filing applications for vocational training is December 16, 1922. This date is fixed by law and is not, therefore, subject to change. After that time no disabled ex-service man can apply for vocational training.

Judge J. A. Bardin has made a decree excluding from the map of Carmel Woods, otherwise the ninth addition to Carmel-by-the-Sea, an area called "Pescadero Park." The decree was petitioned for by the Del Monte Properties Co., which recited that the park was inadvertently included in the map.

Mrs. Kissam Johnson and her daughter, Miss Katherine, left Carmel last Saturday for the East. During the time the Johnsons have lived here they have made many friends.

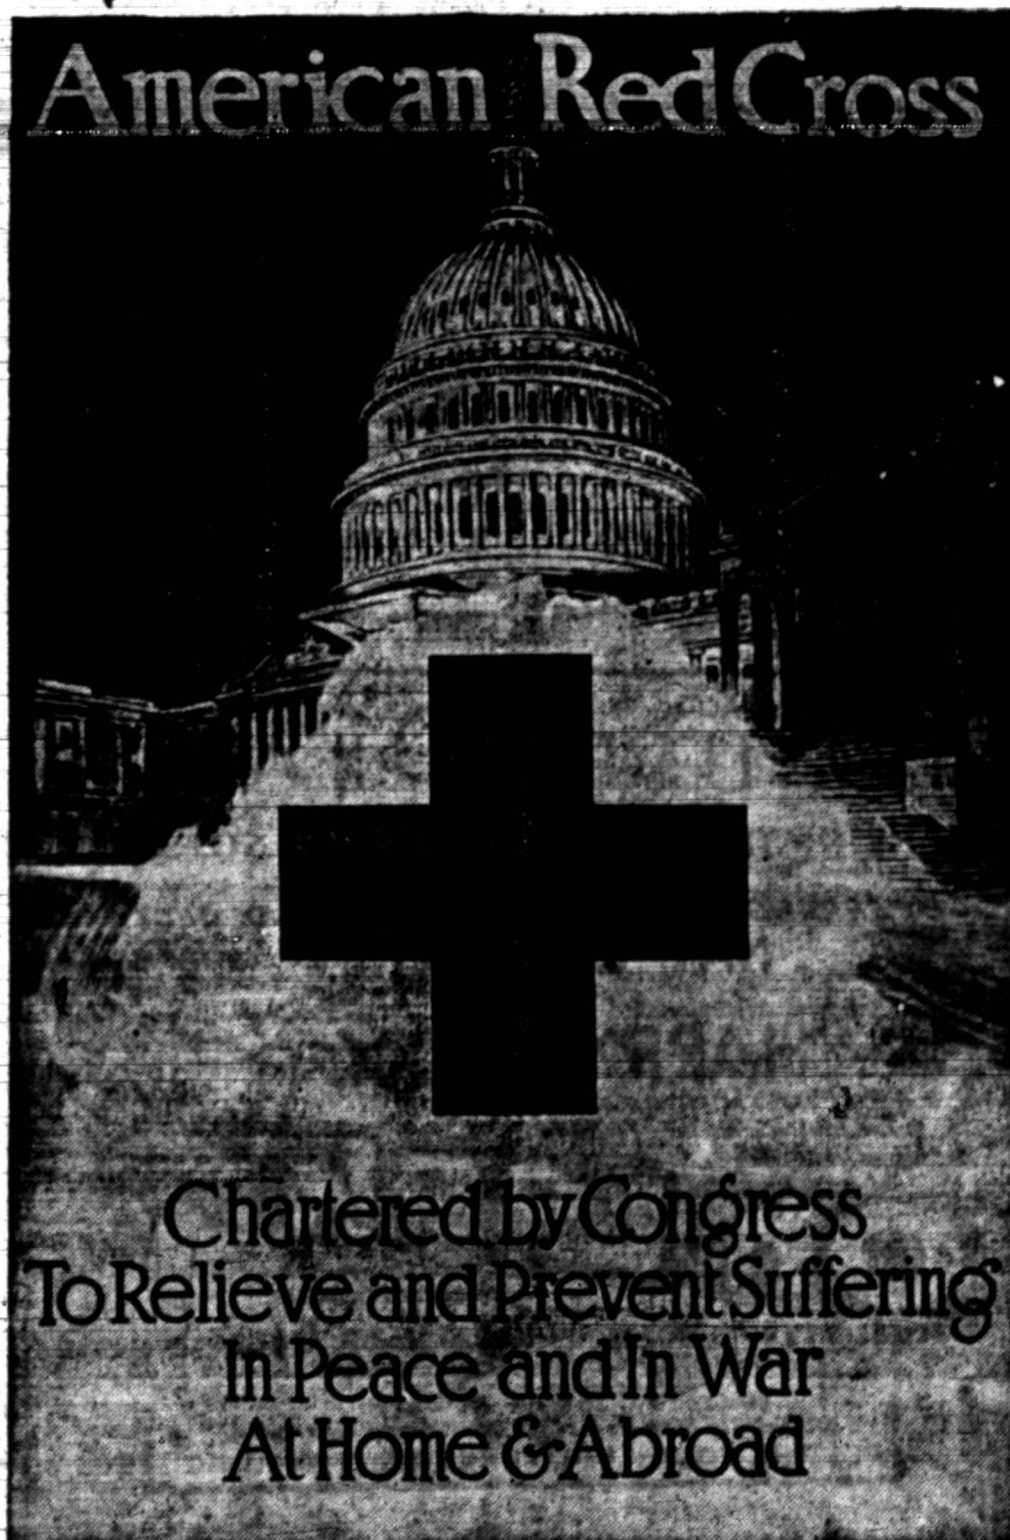

Harry D. Condon and Frank E. Gause have filed in County Clerk T. P. Joy's office a certificate showing that they are engaged in business at King City under the fictitious name of Harry's Auto Car Co.

The Monterey county grand jury was impaneled last Monday at Salinas. Committees were authorized and adjournment taken until next month. Alfred P. Fraser is the only jurymen from Carmel.

The parts for Miss Mae Harris Anson's play, "High Justice" are being assigned by the producer, Herbert Heron. It is a play in four acts, which will be put on at the Arts and Crafts theater the last week in January.

Mrs. Mary L. ... returned from a six weeks' motor trip through the south, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Laumeister. She visited Palm Springs, El Centro, San Diego and went into Mexico. On the return trip, they stopped at the Mission Inn at Riverside and witnessed Garnet Holme's play on Mount Rubidoux.

Striking New Red Cross Poster

Riveting the attention of the beholder on the fact that the American Red Cross is chartered by Congress as an official volunteer relief organization the dome of the Capitol at Washington, upon which is superimposed a large Red Cross, is the central figure of a new poster for the Annual Red Cross Roll Call. The poster, which has been pronounced one of the most striking of innumerable representations of the famous dome, is the work of Franklin Booth, a New York artist of wide renown. It will be displayed throughout the country during the Roll Call period, Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, when the Red Cross membership for 1923 will be enrolled.

Dr. Marian Burke of Palo Alto was here over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt W. Johnson have as house guest Mrs. Hardcastle of Seattle.

Catherine Comstock Seideneck is kept busy these days executing many orders for baby portraits.

The Hayes sisters, who conducted a tea room here for several months, have returned to Berkeley.

A present guest of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Reamer is Mrs. Hanson. She will remain over Thanksgiving.

The Kett cottage on Mission Point is now the habitat of Mr. and Mrs. Ira M. Remsen. They moved last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Harrison Thomson of San Francisco are occupying the Everett cabin on north Monte Verde for a fortnight.

Rafael Nieto, governor of the Mexican state of San Luis Potosi, was a week-end visitor at the home of John Kenneth Turner.

Percy Parkes has just completed the residence of the Misses Helene and Louise Conger, on San Antonio, near the tollgate.

Mrs. Thomas Taylor has left for her home in Chicago to join Judge Taylor. They will remain there until after the holidays.

Tom Reardon is back after a long sick leave in San Jose. He is feeling in better trim to take up his duties at the shop and in the city hall.

Many Carmelites will miss Janie Johnston's merry personality. She has returned to San Jose for the purpose of resuming her musical studies.

Additional officers' quarters have been completed at the Monterey Presidio, and the officers recently arrived there have been assigned to occupy them.

Leonard Perry did not go to Europe at all. The months he was thought to be at Monte Carlo, he was ill in San Francisco. He came to Carmel last week.

Miss Mabel Spicker, Mrs. Minna Steel Harper, and Miss Helen Harper were in the bay cities this week to attend the marriage of a friend in Piedmont.

New Yorkers recently registered at Highlands Inn include Norman Sykes and wife. They were here on their honeymoon. Mr. Sykes is a hotel man.

A golf tournament will enliven the Thanksgiving season at Del Monte hotel. Many dinner parties are in prospect both at the hotel and at Del Monte Lodge.

Hobart Glassell has spent the greater part of the week in San Francisco, attending to shipments of imported merchandise for his holiday trade.

Rolin G. Watkins, for nearly two years editor of the Salinas Index, has severed his connection with that paper and is now city editor of the Monterey Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartley Connell of Los Angeles recently spent a brief vacation at Highlands. Mr. Connell has charge of the art gallery in the Ambassador hotel.

Mrs. Lotta Shipley returned this week from a trip to Los Angeles and other southern cities. She reports good roads everywhere but in Carmel, and wonderful weather.

Union Thanksgiving service will be held on Sunday evening instead of Thursday, at the Carmel Church, and Rev. F. G. Williams of All Saints Church will deliver the address. The time is 7:30.

Dr. Allen Hamilton Williams spent the early part of the week visiting his cousin, Susan Creighton Porter. He is from Santa Barbara and was a member of the party, which included Mrs. Porter, on the desert trip a few weeks ago.

Lunatics Run Amuck at La Playa Rancho

Never before were so many "nuts" gathered under one roof in these parts as assembled at La Playa Rancho on Thursday night.

All types of mental derangement were on exhibition and under observation. For instance, the Pine Cone reporter actually saw a man dance twice with his own wife, and it is a fact that one poor unfortunate, in the garb of a sailor, tossed doughnuts about under the impression that they were life-preservers.

The party certainly had a kick, and this applies to the coffee as well. The apples were hard, but the cider was not.

Next?

John B. Jordan will inaugurate a series of winter dinner dances at Pine Inn on the evening of Saturday, December 2.
